

OIKOS MARINE & SOUTH SIDE DEVELOPMENT

How will the proposals operate?

Once operational, the OMSSD project will simply form a continuation of the operations that already take place at the Oikos facility.

These operations comprise of the unloading of liquid products from berthed ships, storage of the products in the tanks on the site followed by distribution across the UK, principally by means of the existing underground pipeline networks and additionally by road tanker. The new pipelines and infrastructure proposed on the jetties will also allow for products to be exported by ship away from the facility.

At this early stage it is not yet known how much product will be distributed by each of these different methods.

Over the coming months, the OMSSD project will be subject to further design, evaluation and assessment. An important part of this process will involve taking account of issues and feedback that you have provided during this current informal consultation process.
